

Title: Asensio & Company: ParkerVision Has No D2D Patents. D2D Site Contains No New Information. Patent Counsel Gets $18.75 Warrants.

Date: 10/1/1999; Publication: PR Newswire;

NEW YORK, Oct. 1 /PRNewswire/ -- The following is being issued by Asensio & Company, a member of the National Association of Securities Dealers, CRD number 31742:

Yesterday, ParkerVision, Inc. (Nasdaq: PRKR) unveiled a website dedicated to its fraudulent D2D stock promotion. In a press-release-headline announcing the website, ParkerVision claimed that the "completion of multiple patent filings makes (this) disclosure possible." These statements may lead investors to believe that ParkerVision has released some new information on D2D or that it has received a D2D patent. It has not. ParkerVision announced its patent filings on March 28, 1996, and has never been granted any patents on its wireless technology claims. Neither the press release nor the D2D website contain any new information on the D2D and contain little more than what was contained in a press release dated July 9, 1998 titled "ParkerVision Direct2Data introduced in response to market demand." If D2D exists, it is at the very best a commonplace radio component that has failed to generate a single sale in 3-1/2 years.

No independent event precipitated yesterday's press release. We believe that ParkerVision elected to announce the website and the "completion" of some undefined patent filings to assist its stock promoters. These stock promoters apparently include ParkerVision's outside patent counsel. ParkerVision attributed certain promotional comments to its outside counsel in yesterday's press release. However, ParkerVision did not disclose that it granted its outside patent counsel warrants to purchase 75,000 shares at $18.75 per share in 1998.
